2. Mr. Miller stated that he wanted a careful examination made of our needs for R&D Equipment testing ending with the preparation of a Notice on the subject. [redacted] had been invited to attend the meeting because of his past interest and experience and the fact that the Project Officers Handbook treats this subject in part. [redacted] was invited to share his views on the need for having test plan requirements placed into R&D contracts at the time of initiation rather than later calling upon the contractor to conduct tests which in nearly every case is more expensive. In either instance, however, [redacted] noted that well defined test procedures to demonstrate performance are expensive.
